Crest To Coast President's Corner

Greetings from the Crest To Coast Team. We have had a busy winter planning for and attending our Soul Retreats. They are becoming a very popular way for communities to get together whether they have United Women In Faith Units or not. These are planned with various programs and topics with the local ladies and our District representatives. We have another retreat planned at Bay Center UMC on Willapa Bay, Friday July 18, a "Loaves and Fishes Picnic" with Sue Raymond presenting a Jewish Midrash, "Loaves and Fishes." It sounds fun and if you can get over there please join us. Puyallup UMC will host another retreat in the fall, watch for details on that one and there is one or two to come. Joan Hackett would be glad to fill you in on all the details if you would like one in your community.

Mission U is coming up, July 24-26 in Yakima, Washington. The theme is "Practicing Hope Together." All United Women in Faith are encouraged to attend. These are always well planned and a fun way to meet other women. The Sharing Line and this Newsletter have all the information and the registration form. I can always send it to you if needed.

The District Fall gathering is September 20 so put that on your calendar now. An information sheet and registration form is to come. We would love to have you come to Centralia, Washington and join us for our yearly meeting and more.

We are always looking for folks to join us on our District team. Are you good at taking notes? We are looking for someone just like you to take our minutes. We meet about four or five times a year and have a good time planning for the District. We do try to help with some expenses and Mission U. There are other vacancies to fill also for next year. We try to make it more fun than work and would love to talk to you about these opportunities. You can reach me at the email above or any of the members of our team listed in the District directory.

United Women In Faith is so much more meaningful and relatable when you participate in the district events. We are all here to serve women, children and youth for the betterment of our world and learn in the process.

Have an enjoyable summer.
Blessings,
Bev Thomas,
Crest To Coast District President

From the Treasurer

Dear Treasurers of Crest To Coast Missional District

I want to pass along some Treasurers information I received from Roberta Headley, our Conference Treasurer.

She sent us a list of the 2/3/4 Quarter giving dates.

June 15, 2025 2nd Quarter

September 15, 2025 3rd Quarter

December 12, 2025 4 Quarter/ Year end

The last Quarter has an earlier date as she needs to send out our Reported giving for the year before the Christmas Holidays to National Division.

Roberta Headley also asked me to send a Proposed Budget for 2026 by July 5, 2025.

Beverly Thomas and I met today and discussed what 2026 Pledge to Mission might look like. I am thinking that we will most likely have the same as 2025 Pledges $12,750.

So far I have only received Pledge remittances from 4 of our Units. I know that many of our units do not meet in the Summer so I am asking for what I can expect from the remaining 5 Units by June 15, 2025.

This is what I will send to cover the first half of 2025.

Thank you for your continued support of our Crest to Coast District UWF.

I am also hoping to see you in July at Mission u July 24-26.

Yours truly in United Women in Faith

Soul Care Retreat

March 10, 2025

Reconnecting with longtime United Women in Faith friends and meeting women who are being introduced to UWF always bring a smile to my face and heart. At the Soul Care Retreat at the Stevenson UMC on March 10 I was able to do both. The retreat nourished not only our souls but also our spirits. Focusing on women and faith provided a connection to our past as well as a path to our future.

With this focus we sang songs written by women, learning about those composers and lyricists from histories read by Joan Hackett. The celebration of women continued throughout the day as we shared women who have impacted our spiritual lives, shared our own journey with church and faith, and listened to the histories of Stevenson United Methodist Women and the White Salmon United Methodist Women. The highlight for me was the midrash (biblical text interpretation) of Esther presented by Sue Raymond. Her cloak and jewelry added to the illusion of Esther, but the words of Esther's journey and her efforts to save the Jewish people mesmerized all who witnessed it. My understanding and appreciation of Esther's journey grew as I imagined Esther's discovery of her "true purpose" in life.

And as always, sharing a meal with other Methodist women is a highlight of any gathering, and this was true at the Stevenson Soul Care Retreat as well. Every woman left with their bodies and their souls nourished.

Comments gathered from some of the 14 attendees-

- Women's Luncheon-Well planned- wonderful female souls- liked story of Esther community of women always a joy
- The program about Esther was wonderful. Great hymn selection.
- A super great program- Thank you

- Enjoyed getting together with other United Women in Faith women- singing, praying, eating, Such dramatic presentations- it was rejuvenating. Thank you all
- So far everything has been quite nice, Loved Sue's presentation about Esther. That was fantastic. Great meeting, wonderful food.
- I really enjoyed Sue's presentation of Esther. It was a unique way to express the story. It is refreshing to see a program for women that incorporates music from women.
- I thought the program was very compelling. Sue's midrash was so educational. The singing was inspirational. The food was delicious. It was such fun meeting women and new United Women in Faith Women and reconnecting with women who have served UWF for many years.
- Interesting, inspiring
- I have been attending women's programs and been involved over 60 years. Sue's program today was the best and most memorable. When I got home, my husband was not here. I needed to tell him about it so much so called on his cell to share the day. When Sue took that piece of material, wrapped it around and over her shoulder, added the necklaces, with Joan's help, she became Esther. We were wrapped up in Esther's identity until that fabric was undone. Thank you for your encouragement to host the meeting. Karin Ditzler would be so proud! She was determined we would have the meeting in Stevenson. Thank you, a million times. Janet
- Just a note to say how much I enjoyed "Sharing Our Souls and Celebrating Women" retreat. My spirit was uplifted by being with women who shared their faith journeys. In reflection I thought of the wonderful every-other-week feasts that our church provides. Sometimes, on a good night, we have fed up to 50 folks, in a town that has poverty and where grocery prices have skyrocketed. I feel the presence of God every time I'm in the kitchen on those evenings with the community of men and women feeding people. Many of our church participants have left this earth, so our congregation is very small. It's a wonder that providing food which is so basic while reducing loneliness for our folks, is accomplished by such a small group in the kitchen!

The Howell and Debolt forget Me Not seeds will rest in peace in our church garden. I'm going to paint two rocks with their names to bring attention to lives well lived.      Many blessings, Erica

Postscript

Stevenson women had prepared a cashew chicken casserole and salad, and Deb Avery brought half her birthday carrot cake. Like at Grays River we began in the sanctuary then ate in the fellowship hall and did the coloring of the Bridge of the Gods drawn by Erica, a Stevenson artist, and the rest of the program there.

I gave packets of Forget Me Nots seeds year given out at our Conference Gathering last year at Spokane Valley, to remember Merna Debolt and Gloria Howell from Stevenson who died last year. Later at the Celebration on Life on April 19 for Karin Ditzler, who had helped plan this event, I gave another packet of seeds. Erica has painted large stones with names decorated with Forget Me Nots to be placed by the church entrance where the seeds will be planted in remembrance.

Transformational Education Opportunity

As your Conference President of United Women in Faith, I was blessed to be able to attend a very informative program around the topic of Social Media and its impact on “Teen Anxiety” in our culture today. Our presenter was KATHY HARDY, a middle school math teacher in Vancouver School District and active member of Salmon Creek United Methodist Church. Our thanks to Salmon Creek members for hosting and to Joan Hackett, “Membership, Outreach and Nurture” coordinator for Crest to Coast Missional District of United Women in Faith (formerly United Methodist Women) for the support of this learning opportunity.

It was exciting to see and hear Kathy in action since I first got to know about her passion for children and youth when she served as a district officer several years ago. Kathy was very well prepared in her presentation using a variety of learning techniques. We had ample time for group discussion and questions as well. She shared a wealth of data regarding the use of social media and anxiety in our youth based on research as well as her personal experience with youth of a variety of ages.

We began reflecting on our own “best and worst” memories of our own time as a teenager. She shared additional recommended resources for our further exploration such as “The Anxious Generation” by Jonathan Haidt. We discussed ways to support “disengagement from sociamedia” with our youth, especially as we model this as adults.

The following is a litany written especially for this program and we committed to praying regularly for children, youth and their families that we love and care deeply about...whether or not we know their names. This is the core Purpose of United Women in Faith....Mission and Ministry with Women, Children and Youth. You can contact Kathy at Kathy.hardy@vansd.org if you would like to know more!

Racial Justice Engagement Opportunities for Local Units of United Women in Faith

Share with your District President which of these activities you have completed:

Build awareness.

- Distribute a copy of the Charter for Racial Justice to every United Women in Faith member in your unit and to members of your local church. Post it on a church bulletin board or include a link in your digital newsletter. Read and discuss the Charter at your unit/circle meetings.
- Develop a regular practice of reading/sharing news articles from local and regional news sources related to racial justice issues in your community.
- Host a racial justice guest speaker from your community at your unit/circle meeting. Seek out a trusted voice with a history of deep engagement. Be sure to compensate that person appropriately for the time and energy of preparing and presenting.

United
Women
in Faith

Grow your understanding of racial justice.

- Engage in a Bible study or devotional program focused on racial justice themes. Explore the resources available from United Women in Faith, the General Commission on Religion and Race (GCORR), Discipleship Ministries, Church and Society, Black Methodists for Church Renewal, MARCHA—Metodistas Asociados Representando la Causa de los Hispano-Americanos, New Federation of Asian American United Methodists, Native American International Caucus, and Pacific Islanders: National Caucus of United Methodists.
- Study United Women in Faith's Racial Justice Time Line together. Invite each member to choose an event for deeper research and study. Then bring back your learnings to share with one another at the next unit/circle meeting.
- Lead the "Because We Believe: Life Within United Women in Faith" workshop during a unit/circle meeting. This dynamic workshop offers a variety of United Women in Faith-specific scenarios for member engagement and reflection.
- Screen a film or TV documentary series on racial justice and discuss it as a group.
- Participate together as a unit in a webinar related to racial justice and one of the two United Women in Faith campaigns (Just Energy for All and/or Interrupting the School-to-Prison Pipeline).
- Attend a conference- or district-sponsored racial justice event together.
- Lead a racial justice book study, drawing from trusted reading list recommendations. One useful resource for beginning this work is So you want to talk about race by Ijeoma Oluo. A companion supplemental online course is also available for readers who want to go deeper.
- Plan a pilgrimage to an important local site in your region's racial justice history. For example, you might visit a local civil rights museum, a justice memorial or local courts and/or ports of entry with trustworthy guides.

QUESTIONS TO CONSIDER WHEN PLANNING

How can we engage new members and potential members in our racial justice programming? (For more on member engagement, connect to Recruitment Guide here.)

How can we engage/partner with our pastor(s) and other lay ministry teams in our church to deepen our impact?

Are there special Sundays or other seasons of the Christian year that may be especially useful times to engage?

Build relationships across lines of race and ethnicity.

- Plan a joint unit/circle meeting with a unit/circle of a different racial/ethnic background. Be attentive to issues of equity in your planning and participating. For example: Who has to travel and who gets to be “host”? How are speaking/listening times shared responsibly? How is your gathering aligned with our “sisterhood of grace” guidelines?
- Plan a joint worship service with a church whose majority membership is of a different racial, ethnic or language background than your own church.
- Develop a relationship with your United Methodist Church Conference Commission on Religion and Race (CCORR) team. Connect your United Women in Faith circle/unit to your conference’s racial justice work.

Take action.

- Join local coalition efforts to advance racial justice in your local community. Regularly support the group with your prayers, your presence, your gifts and your service.
- Participate in a local or state-level vigil, march, advocacy day or other public witness for racial justice. You might think about collaborating with groups such as the NAACP, Black Lives Matter, United We Dream or others.
- Hold a letter-writing event after church to support racial justice-focused efforts through one of United Women in Faith’s two national campaigns (Just Energy for All and/or Interrupting the School-to-Prison Pipeline) or another campaign in your community/context.
- Partner with your church’s pastor, other lay ministry teams and congregants of all ages to update your church’s classrooms, curriculum resources and library to better embrace core values of diversity, equity and inclusion.

Deepen your self-awareness and practice accountability.

- Explore and deepen your own racial self-awareness at an individual level. When in your childhood did you first realize you were [Black/Asian/Native/White/Pacific Islander/Multiracial/Latina/o/x]? How does your identity inform your perspective and experience? Reflect personally and share your stories with one another.
- Conduct a racial justice audit of your church with the help of trusted antiracism leaders. The General Commission on Religion and Race (GCORR), Crossroads and People’s Institute for Survival and Beyond are potential partners in this work.

A Word for District and Conference Presidents: Please encourage and uplift the work of local units engaging with the Charter for Racial Justice. Consider featuring stories in the district/conference newsletters and/or publicly celebrating units’ racial justice engagement at annual meetings or other gatherings. Most importantly, continue to pray for local unit leaders as they engage in this vital ministry.
